Dear Brothers:

Enclosed is a copy of a January 3, 2007, letter written by Brother [REDACTED] wherein he expresses concern about the conduct of his daughter and son-in-law, [REDACTED] and [REDACTED]. You will no doubt agree, in reviewing the letter, that Brother [REDACTED] presents nothing in the way of new facts that would cause us to look at his situation differently. While it may be true that Brother and Sister [REDACTED] have not handled their situation in the best way, Brother [REDACTED] needs to understand that he may have to deal with some of the sad consequences of his own wrongdoing. [REDACTED] [REDACTED] [REDACTED]

Please arrange for two elders to call on Brother and Sister [REDACTED]. Those selected should explain to Brother [REDACTED] that we are responding to his letter by means of their visit. He should be encouraged to reflect on the words of Ecclesiastes 12:14. Additionally, the elders could draw material from the article on page 5 of the October 8, 1992 issue of Awake!, "Negative Emotions – How Can They Be Overcome?". We trust that those assigned will speak frankly, but in a kind and loving manner.

Please keep us apprised if any significant details come to light in this matter. You can be sure that your conscientious effort in behalf of the flock is deeply appreciated. We take advantage of this opportunity to convey our warm greetings.

Your brothers,

Christian Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses
